This year we have put in tappers at the firemen's houses, and we find it makes quicker time in getting out when there is an alarm.

There has been nine bell alarms during the year, one being a false alarm, and sixteen sill alarms.

The hose has been used but three times during the year, all other fires handled with chemicals.

SCHOOL REPORTS

In making my second annual report I wish to point out some interesting particulars regarding the various schools and offer certain statistics concerning them which I hope will be of value.

OUTLYING DISTRICTS

While the Union school has been growing rapidly the average daily attendance in all the district schools has fallen. At Oak Hill the pupils have dropped by removal nearly one-half, leaving about ten pupils in average daily attendance. The per cent of attendance in these schools however, has been excellent, and the teachers have all worked hard to make their schools successful.

When all is said and done, however, a comparison between the opportunities we have been able to give these children in the district schools and the opportunities their friends in the Union school have enjoyed is painful. Small, isolated district schools under the best of conditions are hardly ever strong schools, and no stretch of the imagination will make them so.

Roll of Honor.

UNION SCHOOL

At the time of writing the Union school has enrolled three hundred and forty-two pupils. It was built to accommodate about three hundred. In the first grade there are over seventy pupils, and of these undoubtedly sixty will be promoted to the second grade next year. There are forty-six pupils in the second grade, planned to hold forty-two. The third grade next year will undoubtedly contain between fifty and sixty pupils. The only two rooms not yet working up to their limit are the seventh and eighth grades. This is because the natural growth of the school strikes the lower grades first, and because many children drop out before finishing the course.

Contrary to the general supposition very little relief would be had by turning away those pupils now attending the school from outside districts. Most of these pupils are, very naturally, in the upper grades, where congestion is least felt. Only a very few are attending in the lower grades from other districts. There are, it is true, a good many pupils in the school who are sent to Tilton to board with relatives to attend the graded school and enjoy the High school course as well, but this is a situation which, under the present law of this state, cannot be helped.

The unexpected growth of the Union school is familiar to all, but I doubt if many realize that the condition has arrived where the school simply will not contain the pupils next year.

There is another fact of the greatest significance. Under the school appropriation law of last year eighty thousand dollars was appropriated for the benefit of the schools in towns whose equalized valuation is not over seven thousand dollars, and whose population is not over three thousand five hundred. From this, two dollars a week will be awarded, to every town qualified, for each teacher employed who holds a Normal school diploma or a state certificate.

Now since the Union Board does not mean to hire teachers who do not hold these papers and since ten teachers at least will be needed next year, the Union district should draw seven hundred and twenty dollars from the State for these qualified teachers.

Besides this there is allowed for every twenty-five pupils in the school of a qualified town, a certain sum per week, running from seventy-five cents to a dollar and a half, according to tax rates and equalized valuation, known as average attendance money. Just what this would amount to is not exactly known as there is no exact basis for figuring, but it is supposed that this would bring the amount from both funds above the thousand dollar mark, judging from what qualified towns are getting.

Unfortunately the Supreme Court has decided lately that for the reason that the Union district has no basis for an equalized valuation, and probably other reasons of the same nature, not one cent of the above mentioned money can be paid to the Union district. This is a matter which really affects the whole town of Northfield, and equally that of Tilton, both towns losing equally this share of the state money.

In a letter to the Tilton Selectmen, explaining this matter, the State Superintendent advises abolishing the Union district lines, and thus making it possible to share in this money.

There are some plans of work now on foot in the school which are expected to accelerate the progress of children through the grades. The amount of reading in the second grade this year has been about doubled, and the amount in the third and fourth grades greatly increased. At the same time a definite course in reading has been started in the sub-primary. It is proposed to raise the lowest grade to the straight first primary work next fall, and make the age of entrance to this first grade six years, as is the case in almost every school system in the state. I hope to promote almost all pupils in the lower grades on the general principle that even if a child is slow in study and falls behind in a certain subject he seldom gains much from going back to do it over, and is often stimulated to fresh efforts by going into new fields. The basis for promotion in the lower grades will be maturity and general ability rather than actual accomplishment in certain lessons.

There is some expectation also of a general re-arrangement in the administration of the school. Up to the present all teachers have received the same pay except the principal, who has had at least double what the others received, and has taught the eighth grade. It is generally conceded, however, that the eighth grade is by no means the most difficult or important situation in a grammar school. There are two other points at which equal if not more ability and power is required, in the primary department and the fifth grade.

The work of the first two, or possibly three grades, is to introduce the children to their first school work, and as they get this introduction so will they progress. If it is done skillfully they will go on surely, steadily and happily. If not, they will stumble, be held back later, and finally drift out of school at about the fifth or sixth grade.

Most modern school systems provide for a teacher in general charge of the work of these grades known as a primary principal. Her duty is to keep the work together, hold teachers' meetings, plan study for outside work, keep abreast of the general advance in primary work, and cast her personality over the department of which she is the head.

Such a person must be well educated, experienced, of good judgment and tact, and have great enthusiasm. She would naturally draw more pay than grade teachers, though not very much more.

In the fifth grade we find again a critical point. Here the state course, which is now followed in the school, requires the formal beginnings of most of the real work of the grammar school, leaving the fourth grade as a sort of bridge between the primary and grammar grades. The pupils are beginning to develop power, to feel conscious. Many of them are awkward and unhappy if matters do not go smoothly, and it requires a teacher of unbounded magnetism and power to form this class into a working unit, ready for the work to come.

Therefore, here again such a teacher would require more than average remuneration. With this work well done, however, and the succeeding years held up to the standard, there should be little apprehension regarding the work of the eighth grade. It is not by any means requisite that the eighth grade teacher be principal of the school, who might with equal success work in any other grammar grade. Neither is it essential in a school like the Union school that the principal be a man. At present the market affords women of considerable ability and training at much lower pay than a man of equal worth could accept. A neighboring town has lately furnished a most excellent example of what a woman can do in this respect with a really difficult situation.

To carry out this plan, however, it would be of great benefit to have a janitor on duty all the time who should have the qualities necessary for quiet influence over the boys about the basement and building, and act as truant officer besides.

We still fail to get the real benefit from the High school opportunities offered by the Seminary, largely by reason of the actual separation of the two schools. I hope that a closer planning of the work may be made another year, and the superior skill and training of the Seminary teachers in courses which are largely continuations of grammar school courses, such as history, mathematics, and English, may be made use of in our school, through teachers' meetings and conferences, as well as class visits.

ERNEST COBB,

Superintendent of Schools.
